William Stickney, your friend and mine—is dead. Gone from us in the montide of his glorious manhood; in the height of his influence and usefulnes; in the midst of his power. Last I hursday morning, when we were urning away from our homes to our places of business, as the bright sandight was streamful to the bast deshouses, as the bright sandight was streamful to be bast deshoused, as the bright sandight was streamful to be bast deshoused, as the bright sandight was streamful to be bast deshoused, as the bright sandight was streamful to be bast deshoused and earnest worker who will long be mourned.

Proceeding, the reverend gentleman paid a most cloquent tribute to the memory of his dead friend, sketching briefly his many good works and the incalculable benefit his example had been to many who would otherwise perhaps have fallen lainting by the wayside. Coming down to the last hours of his life the speaker dwelt upon that crowning faith that had even in the last moment born testimony to the truth of God's promises and the power of the religion of Christ to sustain and comfort us even down into the valiley of the shadow of death. During the course of his remarks the pastor's voice was choked and broken with emotion, and among the congregation many were affected to lears. At the close of Dr. Green's discourse the choir sang, "How They So Sofity Rest," and the five and character of Mr. Stickney, after which the choir sang "Remembered," and the services at the church were closed by prayer and the services and model deads of the deceased. of the friends of Rev. Dr. Newman to see his familiar face and form once more in the pulpit which he occupied with such distinguished ability for so many years. It was an old-time audience that filled every available space in the commodious auditorium of the Metropolitan Church yes-terday morning. After the pews had been filled camp-chairs were placed in all the aisles, and branches, the long, feathery frondage trailing down on either side, a pillar of tuberoses, over which hovered a white dove with extended wings, and a floral anchor. Directly in front of the reading-desk were "the gates ajar," built up of trailing vines and pure-white blossoms. Above this and on the front of the desk was a floral flible artistically fabricated of white buds. The top of the desk was occupied by a crown, surmounted by a cross in white flowers. On the right and left of the stage were a broken chain, an ity-leaf cross, a pillar of white buds inscribed "Rest." a sheaf of wheat. white buds inscribed "Rest," a sheaf of wheat, a second "gates ajar," with two white doves nostling on the arch that surmounted the gates, and a fioral ship. Cuthbert then read the placetic by the chant is the plac the nineticth Pealm and selections from the Epistic to the Thessaionians, after which Rev. Dr. Parker offered a most cloquent and fervent prayer.

The choir then sang "I Will Sing of My Redeemer." Rev. S. H. Green, the pastor of Cavalry Church, then spoke of the great loss the church and the community had sustained in the death of such a man. He said:

William Silvium some contributed and minimal selections from the surface of vice and virtue is not in the human physique or in the human intellect, but it is in character. What character is cannot be exactly defined any more than the astronomer can tell what light is or the student of history define civiltue. By the general agreement of mankind this is the source of all happiness. Again, it is agreed that the source of vice and virtue is not in the huin character. What character is cannot be exactly defined any more than the astronomer can tell what light is or the student of history define civilization. But the essence underlying the word is apparent. In general it can be said that character is what a man is—what he speaks and thinks and lives. In the fourth place, it is evident that the power to studdee vice and develop virtue is not in man nor of man, is not in the Hible nor out of the Bible; but it comes from a source outside and higher than man. It is as high as God. Men are prone to disregard God's agency and sneer at the plan of sairvation; but salvation is the necessary tissue of all true and noble character, and in its nature is twofold. First—To adjust man's relations with God, and this was affected by the death of Christ. He was the justifier of the unjust. Second—To reconstruct human isative, so that man is taken from the chaos of his full into the cosmos of regeneration. In these times the essence of our religion is placed in the crucible of discussion, and criticism and croeds are attacked and faith assaulted. The statement of the text affords a sure ground upon which to stand; that the only power left to man is what comes from Jesus Christ. There are two theories which are advanced concerning man, the first assarting that man is bad only on account of his environment, and that he is by nature capable of being developed to a higher state. The second maintains that human nature is bad radically but not totally, and this leads up to the doctrine of regeneration. St. John's Church, opposite Lafayette Square, sontained a large and fashionable congregation resterday, it having been amounted that the recor, Rev. W. A. An invitation thur was in his pew, and Secretary and Mrs. Hunt were also among the worshipers. An invitation had been extended the French guests to attend the services, but for some reason none of the party were present. Mr. Leonard chose as his text a portion of the thirtieth verse of the fourteenth chapter of St. Paul's Epistis to the Corinthians, and his sermon was a masterly and instructive one. He contrasted the manner of worship practiced in former times, in which pomp and correnonles were the principal features, with the simplicity observed at the present day, and charged his hearers to avoid all appearances tending to make religious services exclusive and mysterious. At the conclusion of the sermon he delivered a short address to the congrecation expressive of his gratification at again being among them, and made certain necessary announcements and appointments for the coming week.

amount of grumbling at this second failure on the part of those having the matter in charge, and eager inquiries were made as to the cause. The power was found to be all right also. In regard to this matter of power, it may be said that permission was first asked and obtained for the use of the engine at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. When it was ascertained that although sufficient power could be obtained, a proper arrangement of the shafting could not be made with the beads of Washington, Lafayette, and De Grasse thereon, as a date at which, according to the articles of agreement, it must be deposited. He is heavier than without considerable difficulty. Mr. John Larman, the mastermachinist of the bureau, went to Jackson's mill and secured the use of their englie, took one of his own men to help put up the shafting, which was 113-16 of an inch in diameter and which was 10aned from the stock on hand at the Bureau, and the electric light people wanted to lay the blame of the failure on Friday night to the size of the shafting. This, it subsequently appeared, was all wrong, for the fault was that their wires were grounded. The shafting was all right, was used Saturday night, and when it is known that this same shafting will continue to be employed the injustice of charging the blame upon one of the best machinists in the District at once apparent, It is stated that in consideration of previous failures the lights will be lit every night this week, so that instead of a weak illumination it will be a week of nightly light.

ANOTHER MURDER.

Florence O'Donoghue Shot by John Noonau. Saturday has been a day of murders and another crime was committed on Saturday last. Whether the shooting was done in self-defense or not will be determined by the grand jury. It seems that Florence O'Donoghue and John Noonan had a difficulty in the bar-room of the latter, 829 Twenty-sixth street, on Friday night, which resulted in Noonan putting O'Donoghue out. He started for home, but was arrested and locked up in the Georgetown station-house for the night. Upon his statement that he would proceed at once to his work in the gas-works he was re-leased in the morning. When he reached leased in the morning. When he reached Nooman's place he entered and resumed the quarrel of the night before, becoming excessively violent, so that Nooman took a pistol to defend himself. O'Donoghue then went across the street, and, procuring

That the said Florence O'Donoghue came to his death between the hours of six and nines, in. on October 18, 18st, at the house at the northwest corner of Twenty-six in and I streets, etty of Washington, D. C. from a pixtol-shot wound of chest, from a pistol held in the hands of John J. Noonan.

Noonan was committed to jail by the coroner to await the action of the grand lury on the charge of murder. Attorney C. Maurice Smith has taken Noonan's case, and chaims to have a good defense, and that the shooting was purely in self-defense. A LARGE MEAT-RNIPE, Dodworth's Band's Concert. The concert by Dodworth's Band at Ford's Opera-House last evening was one of the most enjoyable musical entertainments that has taken place in this city for many a day. The band looked not unlike our own Marine Band, in its red coats, although in numbers it exceeded the latter. The programme was well selected and the execution fully sustained the high reputation this band has for so many years enjoyed. The soloits execution fairy sustained the high reputation this band has for so many years enjoyed. The solicits showed themselves superior performers, and each effort was greeted with prolonged suplause. It is a matter of regret that the audience was not in proportion to the excellence of the concert. The patronage was by no means what it should have been, and the furbstone audience was larger than that within the audientium. Among those present were many of our best citizens and lovers of music.

Budge Presentation.

Previous to the parade of the National Rifles yesterday afternoon, and while the company were drawn up in line, Colonel Burnside, the commanding officer, ordered Private P. J. Lauritzen to manding officer, ordered Private P.J. Lauritzen to step two paces to the front, and in a neat speech presented him, on behalf of the Columbia Rifle Association, with a very handsome gold medal, neatly engraved with his name and the remarka-ble score of 51, 31, 32; total, 94. This badge was won by Mr. Lauritzen in the contest of Thursday matches at Benning's during the past season, and was donated by the above association to be shot for by our military marksmen at 200 yards off-hand.

New Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Theodore A. Harding, of Bing hamton, N. Y., who was recently elected general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., arrived in the city on Saturday to assume the duties of the position. He took part in the evening prayer meeting yesterday and made a favorable impression. Mr. Harding is a young man, and was at the head of a large business house. He gave up his business to go into this work, and will bring to it the energy which made him a successful business man. The association will shortly take possession of their new quarters, on E street, near Ninth. OUR GERMAN GUESTS.

Paul Strobach, of Alabama. The table was exquisitely decorated with floral designs, and the meas was everything that could be desired. The first toast by Secretary Blaine was fo the Emperor of Germany, which was responded to by Minister Von Schloezer, who in return proposed the health of the President of the United States. General Adams gave a toast to Secretary Blaine, who responded by toasting Bismarck. Von Moltke, and Mr. Von Schloezer. The final toast was given by the venerable Colonel Steuben, who, in a most feeling manner, proposed the health and prosperity of the American people, from whom they had received such unbounded welcome and attention. ATTENDED CHURCH IN THE MORNING at the Memorial Church, on Fourteenth street, and listened to an excellent discourse by Rev. Dr. Butler. At two o'clock they were given a lunch at the residence of the Secretary of State and were after ward driven to Arlington Heights to witness the beautiful city of the dead located there. In the evening they were entertained with a dinner by Mr. Von Schoezer. The German officers are full of praise as regards their reception and treatment here, and Colonel A. von Steuben stated yesterday to a representative of The REPUBLICAN that while the invitation extended to them to come here had attracted general attention to the Yorktown Centennial the news of this reception, far beyond anything they had anticipated, would create a genuice sensation in Germany. CHURCH OF THE REFORMATION.

Interesting Dedicatory Service-First Wor

Nesterday was a very happy day for the congregation of the Church of the Reformation. They took possession of their new church edifice, which is a very handsome brick structure, on B street and the Avenue southeast. The church started from very small beginnings about twelve years ago in a small frame structure on First and C streets. They have worshipped there during these years, but the increasing number made it necessary to find more commodious quarters. They began the erection of the present structure last July, and having the lecture-room completed, it was decided to us; it for church purposes until the anditorium was finished. The lower room is very lanidsomely finished in oak, with the furniture and carpeting to correspond. The first service in the new church was held yesterday morning when the sermon was delivered by Rev. A. W. Lilly, of York, Pa., the president of the board of church extension. There was a large congregation present, and about the pulpit were handsome flowers. At the close of the sermon the pastor, Rev. W. E. Parson, stated that a collection would be taken up to liquidate the romaining indebtedness on the church. The total cost of the church has reached so far the sum of $16,000, and there was remaining unpaid about $4,000. The congregation responded very liberally and without any effort $1,500 additional was raised. Last evening ship in the New Building.

times, in which pomp and ceremonies were the principal features, with the simplicity observed at the present day, and charged his hearers to avoid all appearances tending to make religious services exclusive and mysterious. At the conclusion of the sermon he delivered a short address to the congregation expressive of his gratification at again being among them, and made certain necessary announcements and appointments for the coming week.

THE ILLUMINATION,

Why the Electric Lights Did Not Work—The Show to Come Off To-Night.

Saturday night it was expected that the electric lights which had been promised the evening before would surely shed their brilliant rays upon Pennsylvania avenue, and crowds of people wended their way thinker to witness the fillumination. They were doomed to disappointment. The fillumination didn't come off. There was a large amount of grumbling at this second failure on the part of those having the matter in charge, and eager inquiries were made as to the expense.

The National Rifles assembled at their armory at two o'clock yesterday afternoon is fatigue uniform, and, accompanied by Pistorio's Band proceeded to the Baltimore and Ohio, depot to receive the Governor of Michigan and staff and a select regiment of the Michigan militia. The troops were escorted to the armory of the National Hides, and, after stacking arms, they proceeded to Abner's Garden and partook of a fine collation, which had been set for them. The regiment is officered at Abner's until their departure from the city this evening. The regiment is officered as follows: J. C. Smith, colonel commanding: Lieutenant-Colonel J. H. They are a fine-looking body of men, are handsomely equipped, and were the recipients of rounds of applause for their fine bearing and soldierly marching from the depot to the armory of the Hiftes. The Riffes have received orders to assemble at their armory this afternoon in full-dress uniform at three o'clock to escort their visitors to call on the President, after which there will be a parade of the two organizations previous to the departure of the Michigan troops at seven o'clock for Yorktown. Sermon by Rev. W. W. Hicks. Last night this young giant in the min-istry as usual riveted the close attention of his istry as usual riveted the close attention of his apeilbound audience at the Westminster Presbyterian Church, Seventh street southwest. His theme, from Samuel ix., I, was "The Choice Young Man," which he treated in an original and masterly manner. He showed that man never rose higher than the lowest desire of his heart, and that the test of a man's life is his purpose. If all absorbing and undivided, it would develop an unself ish conscientiousness and higher aim, reaching all the attributes of mind, and culminating all things in God. Moral excellence was the best and highest aim. Notable instances: Washington, Lincoin, Luther, Garfield, and Christ. He said of the second named that "Crear fell at the foot of Pompey's statue, but Lincoin fell on the top of his own;" and that Lincoin had split knots that had broken heads and crumbled thrones of other men for five hundred years. He gave instances from the life of Lincoin at eight, twelve, and nineteen years of age. His peroration was sublime. He inculcated on the youth of the congregation faith in Christ and moral excellence as the procursor of a greatness in time and eternity commensurate with the aim, which makes the man. At present Dr. Hicks is preaching in the Westminster Presbyterian Church, Seventh street, on the Island, Next month he and his people take possession of the new edifice on Ninth street southwest, called the "Congregation of the Tabernacle," now nearly completed.
